

Trading Summary

Tuesday, July 21, 2026 | Prepared for Anna

Three trades today, all three profitable, for a total gain of $1,358.60. Each position was bought and sold the same morning — nothing was held overnight.

The Trades

	Bought	Sold	Shares	Held	Gain	Profit
POET	$7.91	$8.18	910	1 hr 19 min	+3.4%	$245.70
VIVK	$6.23	$6.57	1,187	9 min	+5.5%	$403.58
DFNS	$7.00	$7.69	1,028	3 min	+9.9%	$709.32
Total						$1,358.60

The pattern that stood out: the shortest trade made the most money. DFNS was held for three minutes and returned nearly three times what POET returned over an hour and nineteen. That is the approach working the way it is meant to — get in, take the gain, get out, look for the next one.

How We Found Them

All three came off the morning screen David built. It watches roughly three thousand stocks at once and flags the ones moving unusually fast on unusually heavy trading, so instead of hunting for opportunities he starts the day with a short list already sorted by how much is happening.

None of these were companies he was following beforehand. They surfaced, he checked them, and he acted. That is the whole point of the tool — it does the looking so the decisions can be made quickly and calmly.

What We Left On The Table

One stock, CPHI, rose more than fivefold during the day. We did not own it. David's plan was to buy it on a dip and the dip never came, so no trade was made. It has since fallen back sharply and been suspended from trading six separate times, which is a reminder that the ones that get away are not always the ones worth catching.

We also came close to buying a fourth position late in the morning and passed on it. It has drifted lower since. Not every good decision shows up as a gain.

Figures are from David's own trade records and reflect gains before commissions, fees and taxes. This summary is provided for information only and is not investment advice.
